

M. M. Kentigern
discovers a tiny mite lying quite happily near his ruined home.

Fijai village is just behind the Holy Child College compound at Takoradi. In fact, it was the Chief of this village who gave the land for our school.

Now, the student-teachers go every Friday to take care of the poor of the village. They distribute, among other things, the corn meal, milk powder and rice donated by the U.S. through the Catholic Relief Services.

Lucy Amendah, a very active
'Friday Club' member, greets
one of the poor cripples of Fijai.

Complete with ear-rings, bracelets and juju bag hanging from a string around her neck, this little one brings her bowl for rice.

These two children were buried beneath the ruins of this house during a recent storm. Messengers rushed to the Holy Child compound in the middle of the night for help.

Distributing surplus bananas.

A favorite dish provided by Takoradi students: Rice cooked in milk and sugar.
